WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 Isolated Late Day Thunderstorms Near the Oregon State Line Today ***

High pressure will move in on late today and early Tuesday and produce light NW-NE winds with low RH, followed by another weak dry front late Tuesday. The high will build back over the region Wed-Fri and produce a warming trend with light winds. The increase in stability will lead to poor air quality in canyons and drainages near active fires.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Pacific trough dropping down the West Coast will bring a few degrees of cooling today and then greater cooling today. Temperatures will be below normal today through Wednesday. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 12% and 25% above and inland from the marine layer through the middle of this week. The marine layer is around 2,000 feet deep this morning and will deepen to between 3,000 and 4,000 feet today through Wednesday. Morning low clouds and fog will make it up to the lower coastal mountain slopes today through Wednesday. Westerly winds of 15 to 25 with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas and then increase to 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph through Tuesday evening. Winds will become lighter by Wednesday. High pressure will build into the West Coast from the Pacific Ocean causing temperatures to warm to near or a little above normal late this week. A weak area of low pressure inside the ridge of high pressure will form off the Southern California Coast which will bring isolated afternoon showers and thunderstorms to the Sierra late this week.
